

Many individuals struggle to understand and respond to others ' emotions because they lack accessible tools or experiences that help them practice empathy in real-world interactions.